well with the description, especially with the husk splitting readily into four valves down to the base. I send also some of the buds. The bark on a section of wood 3 inches across resembles that of the alba or the porcina. I would like to have your opinion in regard to the specimens, and to know if I am correct in calling it C. micro-carpa. They were collected by a gentleman at Brookville, Ind.

very respectfully
